Applying for QC or judicial appointment is a challenging and highly competitive process. Whether this is your first experience of a competency-based selection procedure, or you are looking to improve on a previous attempt to secure judicial or 'Silk' appointment, our consultants are here to advise, guide and prepare you.

Get your application right first time

During a judicial application form session, we can discuss the best way to approach the Qualities and Abilities self-assessment section. We provide feedback on your draft application form, in light of your unique experiences and expertise and help you make the right choices when it comes to compiling evidence and selecting referees.

Be fully prepared for your judicial interview

Once you have secured a judicial interview you will want to start your preparations. Together we will explore different examples and competencies to talk about that best demonstrate your capabilities. You will leave feeling fully prepared for your interview and confident in how you will conduct yourself.

Avoid the anxiety of interview day exercises

A common element of the judicial selection process is an interview combined with a role play exercise, presentation or situational questioning. These particular components often cause anxiety amongst candidates, particularly for those who haven't previously experienced an interview in this format. The key to delivering a persuasive performance is detailed preparation.

Give yourself the best chance of QC appointment

Whether you are in the early stages of considering an application, in the midst of completing the in-depth and complex application form, concerned that you are selecting the best referees to support your application, or preparing for a QC appointment interview, we can provide invaluable support.

"I am still so grateful for the help which you gave me. I am quite sure that I would not have got the job without your training to present myself better."

- High Court Judge

"Your input was absolutely invaluable. I nailed three questions which had me floundering at our practice run."

- 'Silk' applicant
